Programs & Education

Images submitted by Saint Clair Reide, Jr.

In April, Programs & Education held a member's Critique Night. Members submitted a before and after image. They were allowed to submit 3 sets each. When viewed, the members discussed how they edited their images. The Before & After Critique Night offered members with suggestions to their edits too.

Later on in April, Tony Coppeta, from the Flushing Camera Club gave a presentation on Cell Phone Photography. Images of that presentation are below. He also had us download a couple of apps to edit on our phones. It was a well received presentation that was enjoyed by all. Tony also donated $25 of his fee to our Art of Photography after school program.

Weekly Photography Challenge—

New Weekly Photography Challenge: Pain

It's been a long week! One of those weeks I want to end much more quickly than it has — I've had one of those sore throats that means you don't want to swallow because it really hurts, add to that aching neck and shoulders and a mild headache... I'm tellin' ya, it wasn't fun – it's still going but less bad! (It's not the big C, I tested twice!) ...anyway, I'm rambling on! 'Pain' is going to be a theme for our weekly photo challenge, a theme close to my aching bones right now!

7 Tips for Gorgeous Window-Light Portraits

Most portrait photographers shoot outdoors or in the studio, both of which come with problems. Fortunately, there's a fantastic alternative to both these approaches, and it's what I discuss in this article: Window-light portraits.

In this tutorial, I explain everything you need to know for beautiful results, including:

- How to pick the perfect window
- How to position your subject in relation to the light
- How to make you subject's eyes sparkle
- Much more

Along the way, I'll share examples of infants, children, and adults – all captured with the help of stunning window light. So if you're ready to become an expert...
